The Year of the Brown Earth Ox

My purpose is to alleviate chaos
And perpetuate stability
To hold my ground against
Hardship, danger and adversity
Steadfast and above reproach
I am here to enforce honor and fair play
To set a moral code
By becoming one with nature,
Constantly working toward my goal
To bring about harmony and good fortune.

This poem is a great summation of the new “grounding” energies we are all beginning to experience as we move out of the year of the rat and into the year of the “Brown Earth Ox.” These energies are being felt even more strongly than usual with a President who is an ox in an ox year.

In Feng Shui, there are thirteen days (one a month) every year where one is advised to not do anything important!! They have the unfortunate title of “Master Killing Days.” On these days, one should avoid moving to a new location, trading, receiving payments, starting a new job, getting married, getting buried, setting appointments - anything important!
